Schönauer Hof

Published by the Bürskens Family/ Schönauerhof

Eating and drinking nourish the body and soul

In the Lechtal the Schönauer Hof's restaurant has been well known for its hearty traditional food since 1980. Up until a few years ago the kitchen was run by Peter Bürskens (the only master chef in the region at the time). In 1999 Kai, the new landlord, took over the reins from his father to ensure that the Schönauer Hof's guests would continue to keep coming back.

Quality with skill

Kai & Elke are a textbook expert partnership. He is a trained chef and she a qualified restaurant manager. They made it their aim to stay well away from fancy and frilly cuisine and instead focus on providing high quality products and cooking at reasonable prices. We hope you enjoy your stay and your meal!

The Chamois Hunter (A local Lechtal legend)

Near Holzgau, the main village in the upper Lechtal, there once lived a hunter who was never short of chamois. He only had to lift his hunting rifle on to his shoulders and pull the trigger. He didn't even need to aim properly. One of his friends was amazed by this and when the riflemen all met together he repeatedly asked him to explain why or if it were a trick, to teach it to him.

"I want to show you the trick, however for your own good, I will not teach it to you." They walked on together until they saw a chamois. "Now look over my left shoulder" said the hunter as he raised his rifle. His friend looked and saw the devil standing next to the chamois holding it on a leash. The shot exploded, the chamois fell and the devil disappeared.

Seven farms (A local Lechtal legend)

Long ago in the village of Madau, near Bach, there stood seven farm houses and each farmer had seven cows. One winter an avalanche destroyed one of the houses and the farmer barely escaped with his own life. In the summer the other farmers rebuilt the destroyed house for the unlucky farmer and they each gave him a cow. Once again there were seven houses and each farmer now had six cows. (Lechtal. Chr. Schneller.)
